

On October 3, 2023, I had the opportunity to participate in the 'I Am Kenough': Gender and Sexuality in Leadership event. This event was organized by the Health and Safety committee of the USG. The event delved into how our gender and sexual orientation identities play a pivotal role in shaping our unique styles of leadership. As a LGBTQ+ member and a member of the USG committee for Justice and Equity, the event was particularly relevant to the topics and issues I am passionate about. The discussions and insights gained during the event reinforced my existing knowledge and provided fresh perspectives that I can use to further my work in the committee. I had the privilege of engaging in meaningful conversations with fellow students in the College of Arts and Sciences.
